Short follow-up on our article on Cruise & Callas: In this gallery, every artist accompanies their show with an affordable art edition. The artist Sibylla Dumke presented the full range of her mobiles last Thursday. They transpose Dumke's painterly approach into tridimensional objects. The flat surface of her canvases is dissolved. Colourful geometric forms joined by transparent plastic strings form intriguing ensembles: Moving in the air current the pieces of plastic and cardboard change colour and therefore the whole character, offering a varied spectacle. A childhood toy gone arty!

And now imagine the effect a set of mobiles spread over the whole exhibition space has on its surprised spectator...

It was tough, but in the end we decided on one and are now proud owners.

If you're intrigued: I'm sure there are still some for sale. Just call the Cruise & Callas ladies Simone Lüling and Kirstin Strunz. Their upcoming exhibition is called: ›Stefan Rincks Lehrplan des Lebens - Life would suck without it‹, opening June 5th. The title is reason enough to go see it!

Berlin has loads of these interesting galleries, project spaces and hidden architectural treasures. If you want to know more about them, you can book a Niche Art & Architecture Tour with us!
